

What the Critics Say....

“Haimovitz’ unstoppably committed, enthusiastic playing, superbly controlled in tone, attack, vibrato and more.”
~ The Strad

“In his hands, Bach’s music turns into quotidian sound, a music fully part of the now.”
~ The New York Times

“Haimovitz can tease 1,000 shades of tone out of a single stroke of his bow as he gives each movement its own tone – from driving and aggressive to a still near-silence.” ~ Toronto Star

“...a musician who positively thrives on challenge...” ~ The New York Times

“Matt Haimovitz gave a stunning performance” ~ The Scotsman

“...sensitive and virtuosic: there is great poetic intimacy...” ~ The Strad

“Matt Haimovitz succeeded in ways that say as much about the needs of the music-loving public as his extraordinary talent.”
~ The Philadelphia Inquirer

“His performance, on well worth remembering, was greeted with rapturous applause.”
~ Seattle Post-Intelligencer

“...Haimovitz played with great concentration, nobility of expression, and technical panache.”
~ Boston Globe

“Gorgeous...delivered with immense feeling and passionate musicality.” ~ Strings Magazine

“...this was a smart, tough program, and Haimovitz played it for all it was worth.”
~ The Washington Post

“Haimovitz, an amazing young virtuoso, played with deep expressiveness, a burnished tone and big, important phrases.”
~ Seattle Post-Intelligencer

“‘Intensity’...is precisely how he plays. Onstage, eyes closed, he tilts his head to one side as if the music were drawing him with a physical force.”
~ Newsweek

“These were performances I’d be willing to attend in a coal mine.” ~ Philadelphia Inquirer
